Waveland insurance rates may decrease

by JAKE JACOB

Property insurance rates in Waveland may be dropping soon as the result of a recently concluded survey of the city's fire fighting and utilities capabilities by the state insurance rating bureau.

The city learned of the possible rate drop this week making the information known to council on Tuesday.

Utilities were also the theme behind a request to be sent owners of swimming pools, asking they discontinue the practice of leaving them heated all winter. This in an attempt to better utilize the city's allocation of natural gas.

Council heard Mayor John Longo, Jr., state he hoped the city would be assigned an insurance rating some two classes lower than at present, a grouping that would permit an almost 50 percent drop in rates.

He said the inspector had been favorably impressed with the city's new well and fire house, as well as the condition of the old fire house and its equipment.

City Clerk Barbara Rappold concurred in the mayor's remarks adding that the city's governing ordinances faced amendment to more closely ally their intent with that of state law, but their overall presentation had been favorably received by the insurance rate inspector.

Longo told council of his intention to ask Governor Cliff Finch for an allocation of public works money for the purpose of purchasing a new fire truck. This, he reported, being needed for their station north of the tracks.

The amount involved in the request, to be routed through the Governor's MIDAS committee, is $50,000.

A report from R.C. Engineering and Construction Co., Catholic Protection and Control, Pascagoula, concerning their recent corrosion test of the city's gas system, was also read into the minutes. It too, it was reported, had been favorably reviewed by the fire inspector.

The corrosion engineers found "...the pipe to soil potentials ... to be in excess of .85 volts at all test locations."

This clear bill of health included the line through Kiln to the United Gas pick-off point.

Regarding the swimming pool heaters, council decided to send a letter to home owners requesting these outlets be closed off in winter when gas demand was at a peak, in an effort to gain voluntary compliance.

Should the request be ignored council indicated further, more legislative type action may be necessary to ensure

Area planning agencies studying BSL departments

Work began last week on an administrative study of Bay St. Louis city departments, conducted by two area planning agencies.

Staff members of Gulf Regional Planning Commission (GRPC) and the coast branch office of the Mississippi Research and Development Center (MRDC) will work jointly on the study, which was requested by the city.

The purpose of the study is to improve city services and operations. The study will be an evaluation of the city's organization and operating efficiency.

The work will involve a review of each department, board and commission and is expected to take two to three months to complete.

The study is being done at no cost to the city. The final report will contain the group's findings and recommendations for improvements. It will serve as a suggested guideline for city officials.

The work is being done by Ronnie Murray and Steve Saucier of GRPC and Gary Hemphill, Karen John and Bill Roberts of MRDC.

The administering agency for the program is the Governor's Office of Human Resources and Community Services.

Fossil fuels on way out, NASA NSTL manager claims

Solar energy may provide America with its first "inexhaustible" fuel supply, according to Jerry Hlass, manager, NASA NSTL.

Speaking this week to a group of elected officials and influential businessmen from Hancock, Harrison, and Pearl River Counties, and St. Tammany Parish, Hlass stressed that the opinions being expressed were his own and not those of NASA.

Easily employing space terminology during his talk, Hlass said the gathering of solar energy in space and transmitting such back to earth for conversion into electricity seemed technically feasible, at least to him.

He said the cost of such energy to the ultimate consumer would probably be between three and 11 cents per kilowatt hour, a price in line with today's market.

Hlass said such a process would involve the building of a gathering station, probably some three miles long, positioned in a geosynchronous orbit some 22,000 miles above the earth, and the development of a microwave system for beaming the energy down to a base station. The earth installation Hlass indicated would probably occupy some 20 square miles, and be equipped with the transposition capability.

Hlass indicated developments would have to be made in the areas of power conversion, microwave transmission, space construction and transportation, to permit the undertaking.

He said that only the President of the United States with the backing of the country could decide on the venture.

The NASA NSTL manager indicated that in his opinion solar energy could be heating and lighting homes and turning the wheels of industry by the mid-'90's.

In which case he suggested, his audience could expect the research and development lead to be backed off some 10 years, or to the mid-'80's.

"Fossil fuels are all going to go sometime," Hlass said, adding that the space gathering system would be between six and 15 times more capable of doing its job than a like installation on earth, due to the lack of atmospheric and polluting filter type barriers.

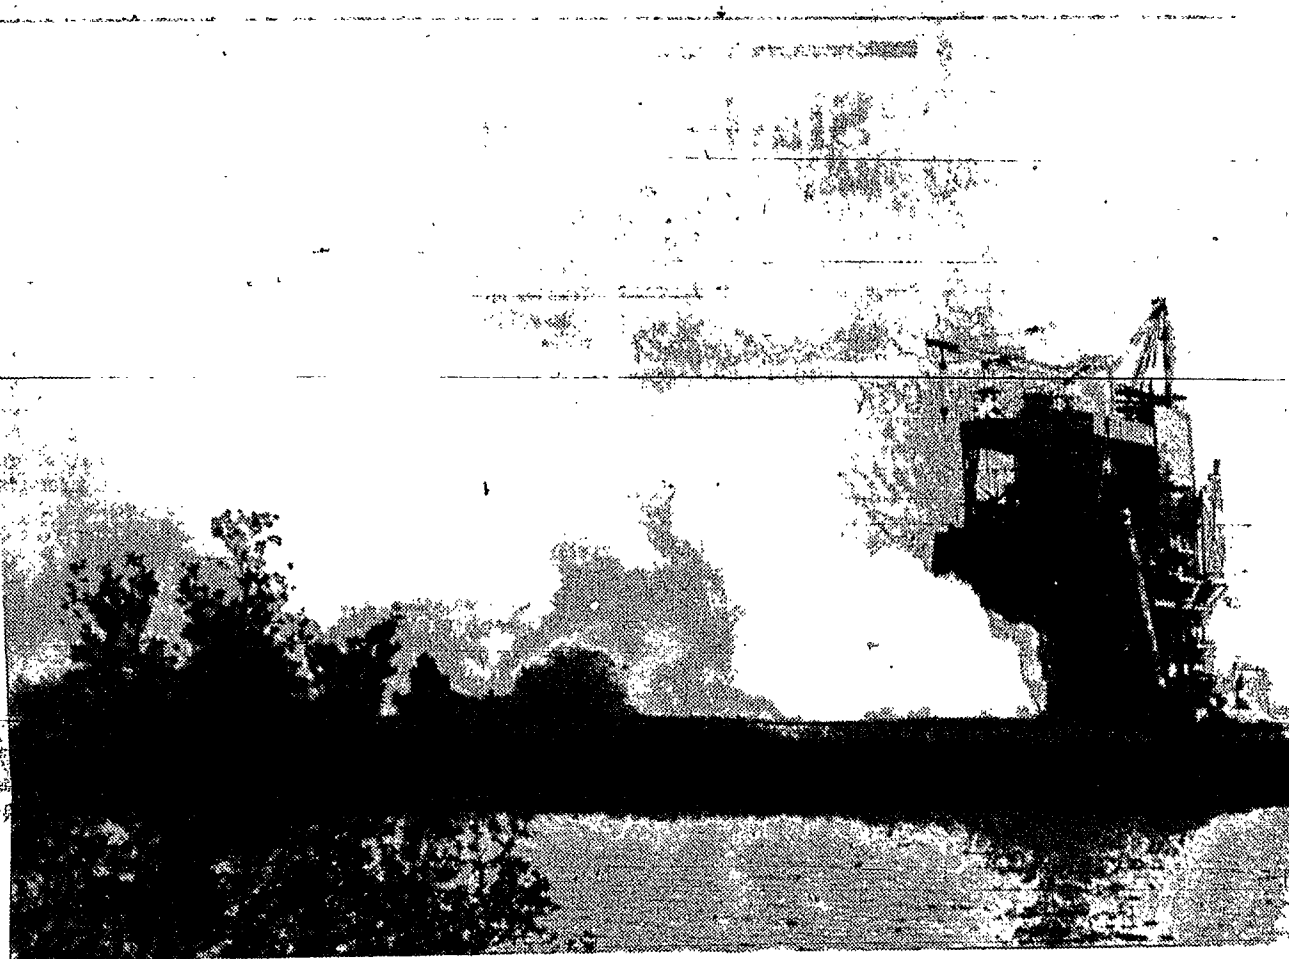

He again emphasized that the opinions were strictly his own, but did almost casually mention that NASA was undertaking some feasibility studies.

Should such an eventuality come to pass the work being done at NASA NSTL will assume new importance as, in all probability, the space shuttle vehicle will be extensively used both for solar energy station construction parts transportation, and final satellite placement.

NSTL is currently involved in development testing of the shuttle engine, and will conduct a full duration firing of each before such is committed to space travel.

Space shuttle main engine, fueled with liquid oxygen and liquid hydrogen, is test fired on converted Saturn V Second Stage Booster (S-II) stand at NASA-NSTL. At full throttle, each engine is capable of providing 470,000 pounds of thrust at altitude (or 375,000 pounds at sea level). If nation moves into solar energy development mode utilizing satellites placed in fixed orbit some 22,000 miles in space, NASA-NSTL test role will be hiked due to space shuttle action as main component transportation vehicle.

Gulfview class space lack laid cause to home ec. cut

by JAKE JACOB

Gulfview School, Lakeshore, in an effort to solve problems caused by new federal regulations is having to suspend teaching home economics and convert the space into additional classrooms.

Principal Harlan Hill told school trustees Monday night that he has a need for 18 classrooms but has only 16. Cause of the crisis is twofold.

Hill said an enrollment of 72 students in the second grade means he will have to operate three rooms for this class to conform to the new guidelines.

"Accreditation standards state we cannot have more than 24 students to a class," Hill said.

The second demand placed on Gulfview is the "mainlining" of special education students, presently housed in Clermont Harbor, onto the Gulfview campus.

School board members heard Hill state that an alternate solution would be to transport students to and from Clermont Harbor, to utilize the two classrooms in that school they wish to retain the home economics department.

The principal pointed out that students participating in the program could not receive credit until they were in the ninth grade as Gulfview was classed as an elementary school.

Board member Louie Ladner, who made the motion, said that in preference to transporting the children four times a day to Clermont he would move to, at least temporarily, close the home economics department.

Ladner indicated he was not too sure that home economics taught to that age group encouraged students to stay in school.

Woodrow Ladner, who with Oris Ladner voted for the motion, while School Board Prexy Monvel Cuevas and Johnny Banks voted against, said that while he was not in favor of closing the home economics department, he felt that the safety of the children, who would have to be transported over the railroad track four times a day to Clermont Harbor, came first.

Hill also indicated that science was a preferable course for that age level instruction for both boys and girls, and assured the board the school would be in no way in danger of losing accreditation because it chose to drop the course.

In voicing their objections Cuevas and Banks said they were against the elimination of a program wherein 40 or 50 children gain.

Board Member Louie Ladner sought to limit further overcrowding in the system, whose three schools are full to overflowing, by calling for the non-acceptance of any further out-of-district students for this school year.

Ladner agreed to a suggestion that this may create a problem for some

Court rules against STB

Save the Bay dropped another decision Friday when the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in New Orleans dismissed a suit filed by the group challenging proper issuance of a waste water discharge permit to Du Pont.

In the suit, Save the Bay stated the permit issued on Feb. 3, 1975, was "seriously mishandled" by the Mississippi Air and Water Pollution Control Commission (MAWPCC) and asked that the federal Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) revoke the state commission's authority to grant the pollution control permits.

Another round of hearings by MAWPCC is scheduled for Aug. 22 in Jackson in the continuing battle between the two groups.

Special funds available to aid in paying utility bill

Governor Cliff Finch said today residents of Hancock County may apply for special funds to help pay high utility bills.

"We will continue to do everything we can to bring financial relief to the poor people of this state," the Governor said.

The administering agency for the program is the Governor's Office of Human Resources and Community Services.

Governor Finch has designated HANCOCK COUNTY WELFARE DEPARTMENT to process local applications.

The Crisis Intervention Program was created by the Community Services Administration to prevent low income households including the poor, elderly and those on fixed incomes who meet specific guidelines from experiencing hardships resulting from last winter's severe cold.

Mississippi will receive $1.8 million in special crisis intervention funds. Funds will be paid directly to utility companies rather than participants. No eligible household will receive assistance exceeding $250.

Priorities for financial assistance have been established as follows:

-Eligible households which, because of large unpaid utility bills have had their utilities shut-off and-or threatened with inability to obtain heating fuel delivery.

-Eligible households which can prove dire financial need at the time of application as a result of having large unpaid utility bills.

News in brief

Correction

In last Thursday's issue of the ECHO, we carried a news release from the University of Southern Mississippi concerning their mini-quarter program and the background of Anne Marie Rosato.

In the release, USM stated Miss Rosato was a former high school drum major, the first at her school, Our Lady's Academy in Bay St. Louis.

The ECHO has learned that Mary Trudell was the first drum major at the school.

We are pleased to offer this correction to the USM news release.

Overpass important

When one thinks back to the last time that two students and a Bay St. Louis Policeman were injured by a motorist, at the Highway 90 and Dunbar School crossing, there shouldn't be any doubt in anyone's mind about the importance of an overpass.

It was good to learn last week about the $50,000 in EDS Funds awarded to the City of Bay St. Louis by Governor Cliff Finch. These Economic Development Administration (EDA) Funds were a part of $3.2 million Governor Finch had to distribute throughout Mississippi. We are happy that the Governor chose the overpass as an important project.

When it comes to a life, especially the life of a child, just how much value can you put in dollars and cents? No further comment should be made on the importance of the overpass.

Estimates run around $100,000 for the cost of construction. With the $50,000 EDA funds from the Governor, $15,000 Bay St. Louis has allocated and the $15,000 Hancock County Board of Supervisors have pledged to this worthwhile project, only $20,000 or so is still needed. We all hope that the $20,000 won't hold up the project.

Governor Finch, the Hancock County Board of Supervisors and the City Council of Bay St. Louis should all be commended for their efforts of correcting this hazard to life.

Washington report

By Tront Loft

AN UNHOLY ALLIANCE

Washington, D. C. - Last week the House of Representatives passed the Agriculture Act of 1977. The newspaper headlines will describe this legislation as providing $12 billion for agriculture, but the fact of the matter is that only about $6 billion will go to help the farmers of America. The remaining $6 billion is for the continuation and enlargement of a fraud-ridden food stamp program next year, and the bill additionally allows for escalation of this amount for food stamps every year through 1981.

There are some things in this bill that will mean a good deal to our farmers, including a program to provide for agriculture and nutrition research and teaching.

The Act will also bring needed loans and other assistance to agriculture at a time when many farmers are facing bankruptcy as a result of droughts and other natural disasters. As I have talked to farmers in Mississippi over the past several weeks, I have noted their concern for their crops in the face of an unusually hot, dry summer.

Another provision of particular interest to Mississippi's agriculture community extends existing dairy marketing order programs for four years and sets the price support floor at 80 percent of parity, with semiannual adjustments. Furthermore, the legislation provides for a loan and target price program through the 1981 crop for upland cotton.

The use of energy on farms also received attention in this bill, and funds are authorized for a four-year solar energy demonstration program for farm projects. Early research on the use of solar energy in agriculture has shown great promise for the future.

I wish that I could have been more enthusiastic about the food stamp portion of this legislation, but unfortunately it does nothing to tighten up on abuse of this program.

Instead it removes the purchase requirement in the law. In the past a person might pay $30 for $100 in stamps, thereby receiving a bonus of $70. Now the person will simply be given $70-worth of stamps with no payment.

Even an amendment requiring recovery of some of the cost of stamps given to a person whose income was over two times the poverty level went down in flames.

The thing that bothered me most about this Agriculture Act, though, was that the House Agriculture Committee tied two totally unrelated matters together for consideration. Obviously the purpose of this "unholy alliance" was to attract conservative, rural congressmen to support the food stamp provisions of the bill because of its aid to agriculture, while winning support for the farm assistance from liberal, urban members because of the food stamp language. In my view these two matters were simply too large and too important to be lumped together and should have been brought forward to rise or fall on their own merits.

In the end, however, the House passed the Agriculture Act of 1977 with food stamp provisions included by a vote of 294 to 114.

The Stennis report

Senator John C. Stennis today questioned David Freeman about his commitment to pursue "a realistic program of area-wide growth and development" as a member of the Tennessee Valley Authority Board of Directors. Freeman has been nominated by President Carter to fill the position of the three-member board which has been vacant for two years.

During a confirmation hearing before the Senate Environment and Public Works Committee, Stennis asked Freeman about a recent statement he made to the effect that the TVA area "should become a model for a low growth, non-energy intensive, post industrial society." Freeman responded that the primary mission of the TVA is to pursue those activities which stimulate economic growth and development. Freeman said that the bottom line for TVA organization is the creation of and pursuit of activities which create jobs.

Stennis said, "Private investment along the Tennessee River area was over $252 million in 1975 alone. This makes a total private industrial investment of $2.8 billion since mid-1935. These industries employ well over

WASTED WASTELANDS?

By ED BLAKE

Abandoned gravel pits, old town dumps, and many other old waste places are not generally kindly taken in this sophisticated era, but it is the same kind of snubbing that has been endured for generations by certain social undesirables whose mere presence and unique contribution to society usually was more accepted and used than truly appreciated.

Wastelands, of one sort or another, occur in every generation and place and cannot stand the light of comparison with properly planned and cared for ground, fields, or forests. Nor can the defective or mismanaged lives of a few in a community's citizenry hold up to the exemplary conduct of the perhaps better bred and/or educated elements in town. Yet, life typically takes both elements in stride to make up the whole and perhaps fares none the worse for it.

A similarly philosophical look at the traditional role of waste places that can be found throughout rural Mississippi scores them retrospectively in a more altruistic light than current environmental or economic standards would permit. And that's simply because almost everybody everywhere must at times have a waste place.

What boy didn't have a place he could turn to just to be a boy? There had to be and there was that place he could go to and kick out the toes from the shoes he didn't like for several reasons but mainly because they squeaked and turned his cheeks red when he followed his mother down the church aisle with everybody looking and smiling, or so he thought.

And there should have been and was a place, a waste place, to get rid of the cat that same boy saw die beneath the wheels of a speedster's car and the boy did not care for others to see that he cared. He found a place and the cat was buried there in a style that the cat might have been willing to spare eight other lives for. Mostly because of the waste place. Because it was there.

Waste places are no respecters of sex either. They take either in stride, offering full, silent accommodation. We'd be willing to bet that 95 percent of the mothers in Mississippi owe some little debt to such unheralded places.

The truth is that many of these waste places are serving society and are used more often than some of the contrived entertainment centers, and even in a more helpful way. This writer dropped in on one recently - an old abandoned gravel pit - and there were scenic dunes reminiscent of the wildest west, a reflecting pool with upland down pine trees framed by fluffy white clouds set in a deep blue sky. There was the rustling bulk of a fine old car there where you could still practice shifting gears, if you were still an active, curious boy, provided you could only hang in there at such a tilted angle.

Old pits and dumps are places you almost never got run off from because nobody cares much. God Himself appears to be about the only overseer and benevolently keeps his distance except when peril might come. It is here that on Christmas Day you can shoot your fireworks and pop a bottle set on a small mound of earth or rocks with a new air rifle. Nobody cares.

Maybe best of all you seldom are looked for there. Mom, dad, baby sister, seem to always just wait until you come out!

"Waste places do other things besides relate to people of course. They have their own personalities spiced with colorful broken glass, rusted cans, rotting rags and yellowed magazines and old phone books. There are the tracks of bikes, motorcycle trails, and dune buggy tracks - not to mention the now unoccupied positions around the charred remains of a fox hunter's night stand.

A bevy of goat's rue, now gone to seed, guards the entrance while a solitary cardinal flower casts its livid colors on the water as summer tightens a burning grip on the wasteland.

The People's business

When the lights went out in New York, the plundering and pillaging of thousands bore witness to the declining moral fiber of American civilization. "It's Christmastime, it's Christmastime," yelled looters, as millions upon millions of dollars of merchandise was stolen from stores, many of which were later burned.

What could produce such logic? What could produce such mass hysteria, simply because "the lights went out"? What could cause these people to destroy their own neighborhoods?

Director Herman Kahn of the Hudson Institute stated it succinctly: "They have no idea what moral standards are."

The actions knew no boundaries of race or economic background. Though most were poor, there was involvement of middle class individuals. Many were Hispanic or black, while others were white. It was, as one observer said, "savage, animal behavior... a mob gone wild."

In the one night without electricity flowing into New York, there were more than 1,000 fires, along with more than 1,700 false alarms. At one blaze allegedly set by looters, 22 firemen were injured. Many of the fires were believed to be caused by arson.

Riots are not new to New York. The city suffered major upheavals in 1964 and 1968. But eight times the number of arrests were made during this crisis, as compared to the earlier riots.

Fortunately, such hysteria has been limited to New York. However, this one example represents a weakening moral fiber within our society. Let's hope we have seen the last such occurrence.

But, TIME Magazine reports, "...behaviors generally believe that, given a similar combination of events, even much the same kind of riotous looting could erupt in almost any other city in the U.S."

If that is true, then our nation is facing serious problems.

Prompt action by the Bay St. Louis Utilities Department has eliminated the gas smell I mentioned in my column last week. The residents of Easterbrook St. are at ease, they now report.

Jane and I had the opportunity of getting together with Debbie and Larry Nash last weekend in Texas. Larry, the former Publisher of the Echo, and I were attending a Publishers meeting at Lake Village Texas.

Spanish Acres Subdivision dwellers are pleased with the efforts by the City of Bay St. Louis and Hancock County in taking steps to correct drainage problems in their area. Ever since Spanish Acres opened the residents have had a bad time of it with water deep to pass through some of the streets during downpours.

Have you noticed how the kids at town have slowed down a bit? See that they have about had enough summer vacation and are now ready for Back-to-School. Now I know doesn't apply to all the kids, but a lot of parents are ready to send them to school. Some parents have told me they are sure glad the ball games are over. Having kids playing in three or four leagues could be difficult.

Parents, grandparents and grandchildren, don't forget Waveland Jaycee Kids Fishing Round next Saturday, August 20th. If the live out of town, give them a call, take them down to the Garfield Lake Memorial Pier, sign them up, and then fishing. There isn't a happier than one with a fishing pole in his hand. I know, I sure was one happy person when I was a kid, and went fishing with my parents.

I sure liked the favorable comments made to me about my editorial on the Pro and Con of Hospitality in Hancock County.

CONTESTS, SURVEYS AND GIFTS

"You are one of the selected few in your community chosen to examine and comment upon this publication. There will be no cost to you, except postage and handling."

"We are conducting a survey to determine local brand preferences featuring a generous gift package from which you may make your own selection."

"Remember, your small Registration Fee is your assurance that you cannot lose in this contest. Everybody wins SOMETHING - winning the BIG prize is up to you!"

Above, in three paragraphs, are three slices of unadulterated baloney.

No stranger will, with any degree of honesty, make you "one of a selected few." No one really wins in a contest in which "everybody wins something." And no business organization of good reputation is likely to send out gift packages "from which you can make your own selection."

When you are approached by someone - on the street, through the mails, or over the telephone - offering you something free in exchange for a few minutes of your time, remember the first rule of a wise consumer: "NOTHING IS FREE."

Phony contests and gimmicks offer gifts and prizes of every variety - it may be an offer of a gift, a meal for two, Las Vegas show, a low-cost vacation, boat ride, a bargain, a discount, or a promise of quick profits.

What they don't tell you is that there is usually an underlying requirement which you must meet. The consumer always pays for whatever appears to be free. No business can operate for long giving things away.

If you are told "YOU HAVE WON," 1. Ask if you will be obligated to list your name to a sales pitch for a product or service. Often, to accept a "prize" is to leave yourself open to an intense and high-pressure sales pitch.

2. Find out what the prize is worth. Its value may be very little and it may not be worth the effort you will have to spend to get it.

3. Ask whether there are any eligibility requirements. In some contests, age, area in which you live or other similar factors may make you ineligible to win.

4. Ask if in fact you have to buy something in order to get the "prize." Be careful of ads for FREE MAGAZINES.

1. Find out the conditions for getting the free gift. The gift usually is "free" only if you buy something, and often you will be overcharged for the item you are required to buy.

2. Shop around to determine how the price you must pay in order to get the gift compares with the price of the item without such a gift.

KEEP IN MIND

A "contest" or an offer of a "free" gift is usually a sales tactic - and a questionable one at that - if you are obligated to listen to a sales pitch or make a purchase in order to receive the prize or gift. Look out for the strings attached.

WORDS OF FREEDOM

The name of American which belongs to you in your national capacity, must always exalt the just pride of patriotism more than any appellation derived from local discriminations... you have in a common cause fought and triumphed together. The independence and liberty you possess are the work of joint councils and joint efforts, of common dangers, sufferings, and successes.

Cub Scout Pack 212 spends night with Governor Finch

On July 21, the Cub Scouts and Leaders of Pack 212, Waveland, were the overnight guests of Gov. Cliff Finch in Jackson. The Pack was given the complete run of the Mansion and were constantly told by the staff that "This was their home!" The entire second floor was used as the pack's sleeping quarters, including a room where the late President Kennedy slept.

During the trip the pack toured the Old Capitol, visited the zoo and park, and rode a small train.

Let the tidings go out. It was a bright day for Alabama football fans last Saturday. Richard Todd started for the New York Jets in the Hall of Fame game. Todd gave the Jets a 6-0 lead at the half. Although the former Tide quarterback could not engineer a touchdown, he did move his team in close enough for two field goals.

Although he had a successful debut it will take the young signal caller more than one game to move another former Alabama player from the hearts of many New Yorkers. If history can repeat itself the Jets will be a team to be reckoned with before too long. The last time they got an Alabama quarterback, they won the Super Bowl.

Todd has already asked not to be compared with Joe Namath but the comparisons are too easy to make to be passed by. Both are students of Bear Bryant's brand of football. The Bear only knows one kind and that is winning. They are both heady quarterbacks and although Namath is no longer as mobile as he once was, Todd can run with the ball as well as through it. Although Namath is more outspoken than Todd, both get their point across.

Let the tidings go out as another SEC player makes his mark on the pro game.

Old allegiances die hard and it will be hard for me to give up my faith in the Crimson Tide. I don't know if I can become a total Mississippi fan. I know that I should, since I am now a resident but even if I can relinquish the Tide it will be hard to root for the Rebels. After the Tide has been driven from my heart I will still have a soft spot for LSU. Although I have been out of Louisiana for several years now I still owe my allegiance to the school where I spent two years of my educational endeavors.

LSU's football has been on the proverbial rocks recently but hope springs eternal as the Tigers face a new season. Here's hoping for a good year for the Tigers, Tide and even the Rebels.

Here's what Congress is doing to you - Now!

Every American has a direct stake in The National Energy Act now pending in the Congress of the United States. You need to speak out today; tomorrow may be too late! (Even though the National Energy Act may have been passed by the House of Representatives before you read this, it is still pending in the Senate. It is still very important that contacts be made with both House and Senate members.)

Unless the American people get the facts and make their voices heard they are going to be condemned by the Congress to lives lived in the famine of energy shortages which will result in millions of jobless people. Our very survival as a free nation is seriously threatened.

And the act is being rushed through Congress with very little attention being paid to the people of the United States and the energy producers of the country.

This message is presented so that the people may have the facts. There are at least NINE major problems with The Act which threaten the economic security and personal well-being of every American. They are:

Problem One - It is an energy famine plan.

It is a doomsday plan, which will produce an energy famine in the United States. Since 99% of our nation's work is done with energy other than muscle power economic chaos, the loss of millions of jobs, and a serious threat to the nation's very survival will result. The plan puts federal government controls over the production, pricing and use of all energy. The record is clear that when government controls the production process in any country grave shortages are certain to exist. The free market has always out-produced and out-supplied any government system.

Problem Two - Huge new tax burden.

Up to $70 billion in new taxes will be placed on the backs of American consumers if the plan is approved. Neither Congress nor the administration has said how this money will be used or how this new tax burden will affect individual taxpayers and their families. Thus, the plan takes on aspects of being a tax plan or a plan to redistribute the wealth. It is a plan for social change, rather than an energy plan.

Problem Three - Increased federal bureaucracy.

A vast new federal bureaucracy with 20,000 employees and a $10 billion budget is to be given life and death control over the energy users (the people) and the energy producers of America. This control over prices and production will produce effects which are either unknown or undesirable. The bill favors publicly owned power, which has severe implications for residential, business and industrial energy consumers, both as to price and availability of service.

Problem Four - Aimed at people and states of the Sun-Belt!

In detailing reasons for his National Energy Plan on April 29, 1977, President Carter stated that "Supply disruptions this winter... encouraged firms to consider moving plants and jobs to the Sun Belt to assure stable supplies of energy." The White House said on June 2 that the plan would result for industry in an energy average cost increase nation-wide of 20%, but the increase for the Southwest (western Mississippi is in this grouping) would be 78%, and for the Southeast it would be 30%. New England's increase is estimated at 11%, New York, New Jersey at 13%, the Mid-Atlantic States at 11%, and the Mid-West at 9%. Thus, the plan would curtail greatly economic development and job opportunities in Mississippi and other sun-belt states.

Problem Five - No incentive for finding new oil and gas.

Finding large supplies of new oil and gas is A MUST for the nation. Most of this must come from off shore wells and other frontier areas, where exploration and development cost lots of money. But the plan would tax away much of the revenue for higher prices leaving little for companies to spend on new development. The proposed legislation and various proposals on price ceilings will be further roadblocks in the path of added oil and gas production.

Problem Six - What about coal?

The administration looks to coal as the energy to save America. But the laws and regulations which have hamstrung the mining and use of coal so as to help place us in the energy bind are not being changed to help improve the situation. So, on one hand the plan calls for increased use of coal but on the other hand government controls are not being relaxed to allow its production and use. In addition there are grave doubts as to whether or not there is enough equipment available to get the coal to market. In summary, no real answers are being given on our country's ability to either produce or use the nation's abundant coal resources. It is just another example of how big government always creates big problems!

Problem Seven - Nuclear power.

The United States has been the world leader in nuclear power production. Now Congress and the President are about to deny the American people of the full benefits which this great energy source could provide. There is enough usable uranium - TEN TRILLION DOLLARS WORTH - already above ground without mining any more, which could be used for the American people if we develop the nuclear fast breeder reactor. France, England, Japan, West Germany, Switzerland, and Russia are going full speed ahead developing the fast breeder reactor to meet their people's energy needs. Our national policy has slowed down nuclear power plant construction and seeks to kill fast breeder development. Such a policy makes no sense, and will condemn the United States and our people to a second-rate position in the world!

Problem Eight - American workers and world competition.

We live in a highly competitive world. If the administration's energy plan causes exorbitantly high energy prices for American industry - and that is the thrust of the whole package - it may make it impossible for American products to compete at home or abroad in the world's market places. This will have a direct effect on millions of jobs on every American home. No one has really gotten down to the hard facts of what the proposed energy program will do to the American people and their economic future.

Problem Nine - Alice In Wonderland!

The proposed energy plan boils down to a maze of government control, energy shortages, much higher energy prices, and literally thousands of unanswered "life and death" questions for the American people. It is based on a report which a number of prominent economists characterized as "an intellectual disgrace." It is simply unbelievable that this so-called National Energy Plan is being "crammed down the throats" of the American people by a national administration and a subservient Congress without full development and publication of the facts. Literally, it is an unbelievable adventure in Wonderland!

THERE IS AN ANSWER

And the thing which makes the whole picture more frustrating and so unbelievable is that THERE IS AN ANSWER. It is not in more government, gobbledygook, it is in the plan old tested and proved American free market system, which has given Americans better jobs at higher pay with more abundant products than any system in history.

THE NATION CAN HAVE A SOUND NATIONAL ENERGY POLICY. The nation can and must have a sound national energy policy. It is essential to cleaning the environment, helping underprivileged people to find a better way of life, and helping Americans with jobs, and helping our nation to survive in a highly competitive world.

PRODUCTION IS THE ANSWER! A sound national energy plan must provide for abundant production of oil, coal, natural gas, and uranium. It must include full scale leasing of an off shore lands for oil and gas development, development of the nuclear breeder reactor, easing environmental restrictions on the mining and use of coal, allowing oil and gas prices to find their levels in the free market and speeding up nuclear power plant construction and licensing procedures. The so-called National Energy Plan now proposed will condemn the American people to a second-rate way of life and national weakness. A program based on ABUNDANT PRODUCTION will help the American people to build a stronger better way of life for all Americans.

THE PEOPLE MUST SPEAK

The proposed National Energy Act may become law by December 1977. Unless it is radically changed it will cause acute problems for YOU as to costs and availability of energy job opportunities and the products you are able to buy. Only an aroused people can demand and get the required changes.

If these views express your beliefs on this vital subject contact Senators and Representatives in Congress in opposition to this legislation. Also, please communicate with friends and associates in other parts of the country urging them to do likewise.

Prisoner's Bible Crusade is busy serving 25 states

"Uncle Chester Lee," flying farmer, cattle raiser, cat fish exponent, and more latterly land developer, has a side much closer to the soul of his fellow man than any of these worldly attributes.

Chester Lee, Leetown, Hancock County, is the founder of the Prisoner's Bible Crusade, a mission active in 25 states and several foreign countries. The Bible Crusade began back in April 1973, a nearly a half year after Lee read the story of 92 men waiting to

The country was green in new life when "Uncle Chester" walked slowly back to the house and told his wife, Effie, he was starting the mission.

Mrs. Lee, after hearing the decision, dedicated herself to help Chester in "the Lord's work," a dedication that has held true through difficult and hard times, and a dedication that has shared in the joy of saving the soul of man for the Lord.

"The Lord's work is going on whether ours does or not. I'm a firm believer in Directory," the Crusade founder said this week.

The goal is considerable as "the directory lists 951 state, and 103 federal prisons, and penal institutions in Canada, England, the Virgin Islands, Guam, and the Panama Canal Zone.

"The greatest thing in this prison Bible ministry is that we have seen the great value of a man's soul.

"A man's soul is worth more than all the wealth of this United States," Lee explained.

that God cares and has love for us all. "That is enough."

Hopes to expand service walk their "final mile" but then housed on "death row" in Florida's Rayford Penitentiary.

"The Lord spoke to me as I read that article in December of 1972," Lee said, adding, "but it was not until five months later I dedicated myself to the crusade."

The full name of the crusade is "Prisoner's Bible Crusade for Christ, Inc.," and it is a registered non-profit corporation with the State of Mississippi.

The sign pointing direction to the Crusade's headquarters, deep among the Lee farm's spread of pecan trees, also asks, "Won't you give those behind bars a Bible?"

Lee considers his unusual venture a work to which he has been called by the Lord.

"I ran from the Lord and ran into all kinds of trouble.

"Two close calls, one in which I almost lost my grandson, and one that demolished a trailer convinced me that God was dealing with me in a severe manner.

"God began to talk with and to me about that time and, believe me I can tell when the Lord's dealing with me," Lee allowed.

The decision to begin the Crusade was finally made when he was working in the pasture about 10 a.m. on that April morning.

God's work going on and will do all I can to help it," she said.

Ordering a shipment of 100 bibles from the T G & Y Warehouse in Shreveport, La., the first mission trip was made by Mr. and Mrs. Lee, travelling as a Crusade team, to a prison in eastern Florida.

Now, some four years later, their accomplishments include Crusades into 25 states, involving some 70,000 plus miles of travel, and the placement of more than 32,000 bibles into the hands of prisoners.

Even so the miles have been inadequate to permit the inclusion of all the served prisons and shortly after opening the Crusade the Lee's opened, an office in a back room of their home, utilizing a donated typewriter and a copy-machine.

Today they work out of a combination office-warehouse built by Lee almost single-handedly.

As more and more prisoners and prison chaplains contact the mission for Bibles, in English and Spanish, expenses grow.

Lee has already sold scrap iron, cattle, land, and borrowed money to get the money for Bibles but his aims and objectives for the crusade have not lessened.

"I vision fulfillment of our long range goals of placing Bibles in over a thousand prisons, reaching every prison listed in the National Prison

Directory," the Crusade founder said this week. The goal is considerable as "the directory lists 951 state, and 103 federal prisons, and penal institutions in Canada, England, the Virgin Islands, Guam, and the Panama Canal Zone.

"The greatest thing in this prison Bible ministry is that we have seen the great value of a man's soul.

"A man's soul is worth more than all the wealth of this United States," Lee explained.

In 1975 Lee told a gathering of people that his ministry had really grown.

"I had no idea that in two year's time I would see what I see today.

"Over 500 people have been saved as a result of this prison Bible Ministry and we're expecting thousands more."

It was also said at that time that Lee was confident the same God that got him started will see him through to the finish. Both are goals well on the way to being achieved.

"Uncle Chester Lee" and Effie Lee have a way of telling it like it is and, in speaking of the soul of man they say, "We have had prisoners thank us for answering their prayers that someone would bring them a Bible to read while they are in prison.

"We have had prisoners cry out, blessing us for caring.

"We have, by our small contribution, brought to many men and women (for both are imprisoned), the realization

Spanish Acres C&S Assoc. selects officers

The Spanish Acres Civic and Social Association, Inc., formed of concerned residents wishing to improve the district, staged their first meeting this week since receiving their charter on July 13.

Officers elected for the coming year were: Robert W. Marks, president; Jon E.

Blanchette, vice president; Phyllis W. Marks, secretary-treasurer.

First project of the association was to improve the drainage of the subdivision and this, through the efforts of Supervisors Sam Pernicaro and Mayor Larry Bennett, is now being accomplished.

The association now plans to develop a recreation area for the subdivision, to include ball park, basketball court, and ultimately a swimming pool. Plans are on the drawing board opening a second ingress and egress to the area. This latter item is urgently needed for fire and emergency vehicles.

Finally the association agreed to police the activities of persons engaged in dumping other than trash into the neighborhood dump. Here a health hazard is being developed through the disposing of non trash type garbage resulting in its attracting flies and rodents.
